

Abstract of the Disclosure

A digital information distribution system having a plurality of nodes that are connected to one another by 5 counter-rotating data paths. Each node comprises a ring terminal that selects data packets from the data paths for use by the node and passes the remaining data packets to neighboring nodes. The data paths communicate data using asynchronous serial interface packets that transport video 10 data or IP data.